भगवाम्याद्येत्र केत्र में भगम केंद्र मार्ड क्रुति प्राह्ये भीता ।

The Rose Apple Tree: In Praise of the Great Omniscient One

Jamyang Khyentse Wangpo

kun mkhyen chen po la bstod pa dzam+bu'i 'khri shing

B55 Kabum, vol. 1 (ka), 191.4–193.3, Dzongsar 2014.

Translated by Zack Beer with the help of clarifications contributed by Khenpo Choying Dorjee and Lopön Sonam Jamtsho. The translation was completed under the patronage of Khyentse Foundation and the supervision of Khyentse Vision Project.

First Published 2023

Version 1 Generated from KVP's reading room on 17-Mar-2025

Khyentse Vision Project: Translating the Works of Jamyang Khyentse Wangpo

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 International License.

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	1
THE ROSE APPLE TREE	3
NOTES	5
BIBLIOGRAPHY	7
GLOSSARY	9

TRANSLATOR'S INTRODUCTION

This ode to the most preeminent figure in the history of the Nyingma tradition, Longchenpa (Longchen Rabjam, 1308–1364) is one of several abecedarian poems that Jamyang Khyentse Wangpo composed. The author's palpable awe is fashioned into stylized metric lines, each beginning with a consecutive letter of the Tibetan alphabet, and followed by free-form verses at the end. Our translation attempts to do the same with the English alphabet. As mentioned in the colophon, the text pays homage to key aspects of Longchenpa's life story, from his time as a wandering yogi to his extensive time in retreat, while focusing especially on his accomplishments as an adept in the practices of Dzogchen, the Great Perfection. At the same time, Khyentse Wangpo displays his own mastery of the traditional Indian style of $k\bar{a}vya$ poetry. The poem is thus embellished with classic Indian images and metaphors woven into the Tibetan landscape of Longchenpa's homeland.

สุสูกิ หลิ เครา

The Rose Apple Tree

Namo gurujñānāya.¹

Adept in the realization of the primordially pure vast expanse (Longchen), Beyond mere platitudes, you have true omniscience. Consummately free and immaculate (Drimé), like the moon, Dispelling the torment of ego with your rays (Özer)—to you I bow!

Eliminating idle chatter, indestructible tones From your indivisible central space resound. Gifts of tea or wine can't compare to your teachings that Hold scripture and realization like fragrant jasmine—to you I bow!

In the midst of the Thus-Gone One's paths of the two truths, Just Dzogchen surpasses all other vehicles and beliefs. Knowing you're already free and don't need liberation again, Luxuriating continuously everywhere—to you I bow!

Majestic as Venus, the nectars of aspiration and application Nourish you, as lilies blossom on your pāramitā path. On par with a wish-fulfilling jewel, you fulfill Perfectly all beings' hopes and desires—to you I bow!

Quietly bearing the hardships of heat and cold, Roaming through pilgrimage sites and sealed places like Cāritra, Similar to the River Jahnu, your focus in development and completion flows— Tucked away like a fox alone in the mountains—to you I bow! Upon the ample vine of naturalness free from rigidity, Valiantly guiding us all to liberation, you bestow the Dharma Without dividing scriptures and realization, having amassed all knowledge eXactly like gathering trinkets in a box—to you I bow!

You are like a yak horn that no speck of dust can blemish, Zestfully regaling villagers with benefit and happiness. With your new decrees of the ten bhūmis you bind All the murderous, flesh-eating, haughty chieftains—to you I bow!

Having tasted the emptiness and bliss that exudes The sweet scent of hari,² you grew into your prime In the unity of Ati, and intoxicated your consort, The noble lady Prajñāpāramitā—to you I bow!

You've halted the currents of fleeting existence in the central channel, And ripened the maṇḍala of major and minor marks, the immutable three seats. Steadily reveling in the consummate, great wisdom, May you purify all realms and bring beings to maturity!

Binding the object, the simplicity of emptiness With the subject, great bliss, May we reach the state free of alteration, Bliss-emptiness in union endowed with all supreme qualities!

From the vast sea of devotion this cloud of verses arose, Letting down a pearlescent rain of virtue that I dedicate So that the scorching heat of suffering is allayed, And the lotus of innate liberation blossoms!

This simple flower of praise of the Omniscient Second Buddha, with references to the narrative of his achievements, was composed quickly and spontaneously by Young Abhaya.

NOTES

- 1. "Homage to the Guru of Wisdom." Emended from na mo gu ru dz+nyA na ye.
- 2. Probably a reference to haricandana, a type of sandalwood.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Dudjom Rinpoche Jikdrel Yeshe Dorje. The Nyingma School of Tibetan Buddhism: its Fundamentals and History. Translated and edited by Gyurme Dorje and Matthew Kapstein. Boston: Wisdom Publications, 1991.

Longchenpa. Finding Rest in the Nature of the Mind: The Trilogy of Rest, Volume 1. Translated by Padmakara Translation Group. Boulder: Shambhala Publications, 2020. Longchenpa; Thondup, Tulku. The Practice of Dzogchen: Longchen Rabjam's Writings on the Great Perfection. Boston: Shambhala Publications, 1996. Nyoshul Khenpo Jamyang Dorje. A Marvelous Garland of Rare Gems: Biographies of Masters of Awareness in the Dzogchen Lineage. Translated by Richard Barron.

Junction City, CA: Padma Publishing, 2005.

GLOSSARY

aspiration and application

र्देशिव : प्रहाय • smon 'jug

The two aspects of awakening mind (bodhicitta): commonly understood to refer respectively to the intention to achieve awakening for all beings and the actions taken to achieve that.

Ati

(N'f) • a ti • ati

A synonym of Dzogchen, the highest of nine vehicles and third and foremost of the inner tantras according to the Nyingma tradition.

Cāritra

र्ड-दे.5] • tsa ri tra • cāritra

The sacred mountain and pilgrimage site in southern Tibet also known as Tsāri or Dagpa Shelri (dag pa shel ri, Pure Crystal Mountain).

central channel

「뒷'찌] • dbu ma • avadhūtī, madhyanāḍī

The main energy channel running vertically through the center of the body according to tantric theory.

consummate

र्षेंदशःशुन्। • yongs grub • parinispanna

The true reality of things according to the three-nature framework (mtshan nyid gsum) often associated with Yogācāra and Other-Emptiness Madhyamaka; it refers to the fact that the dependent nature (paratantra; gzhan dbang) is empty of the imagined nature (parikalpita; kun btags).

development and completion

지훬기 훈계 · bskyed rdzogs

The two stages of practice in tantric Buddhism.

Dzogchen

र्हेग्राय'स'के rdzogs pa che

Also known as Atiyoga, the system of teachings, theories, and practices associated with the highest of the nine vehicles according to the Nyingma school. Can also serve as a reference to the nature of awareness pointed out by these teachings.

ego

ন্দ্রন্থ • nga bdag

Fixation on protecting the needs of the self at the expense of caring for others.

emptiness

र्भेर^{-र्य-} रेन्] • stong pa nyid • sūnyatā

The lack of inherent existence of self and phenomena.

endowed with all supreme qualities

इस्र गुद सर्हेन भुवा • rnam kun mchog ldan • sarvākāravaropeta

The inseparable union of appearance and emptiness, the supreme of all qualities. Also explained as emptiness endowed with all the supreme qualities of buddhahood.

free; liberation

মন্য গ্রন্থ • thar, thar pa • mokṣa

The state of freedom from suffering and the causes of suffering in cyclic existence.

haughty

ইশ্^{র্মা}শা • dregs pa

A class of demonic spirit associated with arrogant tendencies.

indestructible tone

শ্র্পির্মান্নশারু • gzhom bral nA da • anāhatanāda

A phrase that in Sanskrit referred to sacred sounds of mantra that arose "without striking"—i.e., not from the sound of a physical instrument—but which in Tibetan came to connote the eternal power of those sounds.

jasmine

্যাহ্রা • kun+dA • kunda

A kind of jasmine, identified by Monier-Williams as Jasminum multiflorum or pubescens.

major and minor marks

बार्ळ व र् रे मे। • mtshan dpe • lakṣaṇa vyañjana

The thirty-two major and eighty minor physical marks characteristic of either a buddha or a "wheel-wielding" universal emperor (cakravartin).

maṇḍala

קשָּׁמִימִאָּדן • dkyil 'khor • maṇḍala

The sacred circle of a deity and its retinue; also, the symbolic representation of this.

moon

শ'ন্ম'নেইবা • ga bur 'dzin • karpūradhara

Literally, "holder of camphor," one of several common Indian epithets for the moon.

naturalness

শন্তুশ'শা • gnyug ma

The ultimate truth that has always been, that is never produced. The meaning overlaps with terms like "dharmakāya," "dharmadhātu," and "buddha nature."

omniscience

মমমাত্র মন্ত্রা • thams cad mkhyen • sarvajñā

The all-knowing state of complete buddhahood.

pāramitā

শ ई रा. देव। • pha rol phyin • pāramitā

One of six—or, less commonly, ten—qualities cultivated by bodhisattvas on the path to awakening.

Prajñāpāramitā

नेशः रजः मंभे में shes rab pha rol phyin • prajñāpāramitā

The perfection of wisdom, i.e., the insight into the emptiness of all things; also that wisdom personified in the form of a goddess (Prajñāpāramitā).

primordially pure

ግ'ንግ • ka dag

A term associated with Great Perfection literature, referring to the way that the true nature of mind is timeless, primordially pure awareness, never stained by ignorance.

River Jahnu

É、気え、夏引 · dza hu'i rgyun

The Ganges River (gaṅgā) is also referred to as "Daughter of Jahnu" (jahnukanyā, jāhnavī; dza hu'i bu mo). According to Indian mythology, the sage Jahnu drank up the waters of the Ganges because it destroyed his fields and disturbed his sacred ground. Upon the prayers of the gods, Jahnu finally released the Ganges from his ears.

scripture and realization

खुर रेंग्रा । lung rtogs

The Buddhist teachings as a whole consisting of two aspects: the teachings transmitted through writing and word of mouth, and the realization of those teachings in the minds of practitioners.

ten bhūmis

শ'নন্ত্রা • sa bcu • daśabhūmi

The ten stages traversed by a bodhisattva on the path to awakening.

three seats

শান্ধৃ শাধ্য • gdan gsum

A reference to the awakened nature of the body, senses, and sense objects. There are several ways of enumerating the three seats. They can refer to: (1) the aggregates (skandha) and elements (dhātu) having the nature of the male and female buddhas; (2) the sense bases ($\bar{a}yatana$) and their objects having the nature of the male and female bodhisattvas; and (3) the arms and legs having the nature of the male and female wrathful deities. They can also refer to: (1) the five aggregates having the nature of the five buddhas; (2) the five elements of earth, wind, water, fire, and space having the nature of the male and female and female buddhas; (2) the five female buddhas; and (3) the sense bases having the nature of the male and female and female buddhas; and (3) the sense bases having the nature of the male and female and female buddhas; and (3) the sense bases having the nature of the male and female buddhas.

Thus-Gone One

5'됩'지'5| • ta thA ga ta • $tath\overline{a}gata$ A synonym for the Buddha.

two truths

নন্ব শৃষ্টিশ। • bden gnyis • dvisatya, dvayasatya, satyadvaya Conventional truth and ultimate truth.

vast expanse

يَ klong chen

A term associated with the Great Perfection and to the writings of Longchenpa in particular; it is used to describe the profound spaciousness of mind's nature.

vehicle

बेग • theg • yāna

One of several divisions of the Buddhist teachings, viewed as a system and mode of awakening. According to the Nyingma view associated with Longchenpa, there are nine.

wish-fulfilling jewel

 $[\vec{s}_{\vec{A}} \vec{s}_{\vec{A}} \vec{s}] \circ tsin+tA ma Ni \circ cintāmaņi A legendary gem that grants all wishes.$

Young Abhaya

শর্লিব ব্রুজ স্থ্র আ و gzhon nu a bhA ya An epithet of Jamyang Khyentse Wangpo.